

Question 1306) - A man burnt the cloth of someone else. What is the ruling?

A: If the burn is slight, the burner will be liable for the damage. If the damage is substantial whereby the general benefit is lost, the owner may claim the price from him.

~ al-Quduri ~