

Question 953) - A man bought something and took possession of it. He is indebted for the price. He then becomes bankrupt and has creditors from before this sale. The goods he bought are still with him. Can the creditor claim it exclusively?

A: He is the same as the other creditors in it.

~ al-Quduri ~